Advisory: Upcoming B.C. Human Rights Code public workshop on legal rights and obligations in the workplace

Vancouver B.C. – On November 16, 2022, BC's Office of the Human Rights Commissioner will hold a free, virtual session to help people understand B.C.'s Human Rights Code and how it outlines rights and responsibilities when it comes to employment.

The Code protects against discrimination in relation to employment, housing and services in B.C. This includes outlining legal obligations to have human rights protected in the workplace.

Whether tuning in as an employer, employee or both, this 90-minute interactive session will help participants learn about their rights and responsibilities related to employment in British Columbia.

By the end of this session, learners will be able to:

- Identify discrimination under B.C.'s Human Rights Code
- Recognize terms used in the B.C. human rights system
- Recognize what kinds of discrimination can form the basis of a human rights complaint (including on the basis of race, ancestry, Indigenous identity, place of origin, sex, gender identity, disability, age and religion)

About BCOHRC

BC's Office of the Human Rights Commissioner exists to address the root causes of inequality, discrimination and injustice in B.C. by shifting laws, policies, practices and cultures. We do this work through education, research, advocacy, inquiry and monitoring. Learn more at: bchumanrights.ca

About the Commissioner

B.C.'s Human Rights Commissioner, Kasari Govender, started her five-year term on Sept. 3, 2019. Since then, our Office has been working swiftly to build a strong team, to listen deeply to the concerns of British Columbians, to deliver education materials on our rights and responsibilities, to issue policy guidance to protect marginalized communities and to lay a human rights-based foundation for our work. As an independent officer of the Legislature, the Commissioner is uniquely positioned to ensure human rights in B.C. are protected, respected and advanced on a systemic level throughout our society.
